John 6:37

“The Process”

All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.

There is a doctrine which purports everyone will be “saved”. It proclaims that every single soul,
regardless to the “path” they take, regardless to the decisions they make,
despite the entities,

deities, or gods they worship, or their own willingness to accept or reject God, everyone will go to some good place.

The teaching is that, no matter what choice one makes, everyone goes to glory, eternal peace, paradise, nirvana, or whatever word one wishes to use to describe a to use for a blissful eternity—an everlasting good place.

However, in this one verse, we find the biblical process.

Here's how it goes:
Whoever the Father gives to Christ, those persons will come to Christ. Therefore, whoever comes, will not be rejected by Christ.

The implication is that those who come to Christ won't be rejected by Christ because they've been, shall we say, "pre-approved".

They've been verified or vetted and accepted. They are "in". Really IN where it counts.

Christ won't say, "Well, Father. You may like them, but I don't. Let's take a meeting. Let's discuss it." NO.

Acceptance by the Father is acceptance by the Son.

Now, there is no indication that the Father will accept anyone who rejects the Son.

In fact, Scripture warns that no one comes to the Father except, though the Son (John 14:6).

We see an unbreakable connection—a definitive oneness in the process.

There's no bypassing the Son to get to the Father. There's no skipping Son or Father to get to eternal paradise.

The Coverdale Bible
version of 1535 says:

All that my father geueth me, cōmeth vnto me: and who so cōmeth vnto me, him wyl not I cast out:

All that my father giveth
me, cometh unto me: and whoso cometh
unto me, him will not I cast out:

So, making up our own rules or following those of others, because they make us feel good, will prove useless. Like it or not, this is the process.
